 - A Summary of the Nova Scotia Solid Waste-Resource Management Strategy
 - Nova Scotia is one of the leading provinces in waste diversion in Canada, having achieved 50% in 2000 by official calculations. They have the most extensive set of disposal bans in North America, beverage container deposits that reward refillables, and other progressive programs.
 - British Columbia, Canada - Thanks to Michael Jessen for these links.
 - Regional groups have embraced the concept of Zero Waste and adopted it as a policy. The new strategy, called "Bringing Zero Waste to Kootenay Boundary ? A Strategy for a Waste Free Future" provides a blueprint for moving from concept to implementation. It consists of eight initiatives to be pursued at the local level and ten initiatives involving local government efforts to influence change at the provincial level. The strategy is broad-based, targeting increased materials efficiencies in businesses, local economic development through "resource recovery" and public policy renewal to facilitate the development of a zero waste economy.
